Parquetry Floors

Parquetry floors are a stunning blend of wood pieces used for decorative mosaic effect. Parquetry dates back to the mid to late 1600's and is recognisable for its highly regular, geometric patterns. Squares, triangles and lozenges, created using strips or blocks of wood, are all common parquetry forms. While parquetry has been around for centuries it is a timeless flooring product that typifies "What is old is new again". Its undergone a recent resurgence that is highly fashionable.

Choose a traditional strip flooring or if you prefer something a little more high end than ask us about our majesteux parquet range of flooring.

Mosaic Parquetry

Mosaic is a piece of art or image made from the assembling of small pieces. Mosaic Parquetry involves manufacturing timber into fingers of uniform sizes. After this process we make a unique decorative style consisting of the timber fingers being placed on sheets that can be laid in a variety of patterns. These geometric patterns are able to give a project a unique focal point that creates a majestic and stately aura.

Many mosaic materials have a long history of interior design or decorative art features. Timber mosaic is great for not only showing fantastic patterns but also the natural grain that only timber has.

Why not become the envy of your friends and neighbours and get a truly unique floor.
